Intercultural training (Domonkos Sik)

Tuesday 12:00-13.30h North building, room 6.102

The semester is built around the question of intercultural experience, its social historical origins and ways of overcoming its challenges. These topics serve as thematic focus points for the student's work: the group reading of four theoretical essays explaining each dimensions is followed by the elaboration, presentation and discussion of personal case studies. The case studies are constituted of a short essay about a personally chosen related social phenomenon being interpreted according to the theoretical texts and its presentation during the class. This way different cultural experiences are not only explained on substantive level, but also interpreted according to sociological frameworks.

The grades are based on the participation in the group work and the essays.
